Lone Elm Christian Church

From "Lone Elm Christian Church Cemetery Records"

There is no record of when this church was disbanded. The materials from the old church building were used in the construction of the Lone Elm Lutheran Parish School Building in the village of Lone Elm. According to the Lone Elm Lutheran Church records: "Already while the church was being built in 1897, the congregation purchased the property of Dr. Kelly at Lone Elm as a teacher's dwelling and also bought an acre of land, adjoining, on which a spacious school building was erected. In the fall of 1897, the new school was opened. A large part of the material for the school building was obtained from the old Christian Church building which stood four miles west of Lone Elm."
