

Cary Wood

Bartlett

Obituary.

Sister Mary A. Cary, wife of George W. Carey, and daughter of Jeriah and Anna Wood, was born in Cooper county, Mo., Nov. 11th, 1833. She professed religion in the year 1854 and united with the Baptist Church at Big Lick, in Cooper county, and was baptised by Elder R. H. Harris. She remained a member of the Big Lick Church until 1880, when she with her husband went into the constitution of the Providence Baptist Church in the same county of this church. She remained a member until her death, which occurred September 15th, 1883. She was the mother of three children, two of which, with the husband, survive her. Sister Cary was sadly afflicted for fifteen years or more before she died, but she bore her afflictions with that Christian fortitude and patience that demonstrated the reality of the religion of Jesus. It was the writers privilege to visit sister Cary some months before she died; we found her in the enjoyment of that faith that triumphs over death and the grave and finally gives the christian possession of that rest that remains for the people of God. To know sister Cary was to love her. She was a true wife, a loving mother, a kind neighbor, and a devoted christian husband and daughters weep not as those who have no hope, for in a very short time you will be called to meet your loved wife and mother where tears are not known and parting will be no more.

ELD. I. V. JOHNSON,
JAMESTOWN, MO., Nov. 29th, '83.

Hugh L. Bartlett.

There have been some very erroneous statements in regard to the above named person, and, as they have been circulated by the newspapers of the country and have created wrong impressions, we ask for space in the ADVERTISER to make the necessary corrections.

Hugh L. Bartlett was reared in Southeast Missouri and when about 18 years of age entered the Confederate Army. He became a member of Company H., 10th Mo. Cavalry, commanded by Capt. W. T. Barry, and A. Hornbeck 1st Lieutenant. His companions looked upon him as one of the bravest of the brave. At the close of the war he returned to his home to find his parents dead, and his brother opposed to him in politics. He then came to Cooper county and on the 22d day of April, 1866, he was killed on the premises of Jacob Good, near Prairie Home. His body was buried by friends near Pleasant Grove Graveyard. After the boundary lines of the graveyard had been determined upon it was thought best by the Officers of the "Graveyard Protective Association" and others, to disinter his remains and place them within the limits. Accordingly a number of men assembled at the grave in September last, and proceeded to the work. Nothing but bones and buttons of the clothing and a bullet was found. The bones were decently reinterred in the graveyard and a plain marble slab, erected by contributions of friends, in the vicinity now marks the spot.

Respectfully,
A. HORNBECK,
E. S. MONROE.

Nov. 27th, 1883.
