Conrad Helmrich, a brother of Judge Geo. W. Helmrich, of this county, was murdered for his money by some unknown man, in Newport, Kentucky, last Saturday morning. He had resided in the county up to a few weeks ago when he left for the East, being of a restless disposition and preferring to travel over the country. He was nearly seventy years of age and had considerable money. He had started to walk from Newport to Rising Sun, Indiana, when some unknown person shot him. Judge Helmrich was telegraphed the tidings of his brother's murder the next day, at Newport Tuesday evening. The particulars of the crime are given in the following Newport correspondence of the Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette:

"Coroner R. A. Douglas and Dr. F. A. Davis yesterday examined the body and pronounced the death a case of homicide. The Coroner and Dr. Davis were accompanied by a large crowd of citizens, who were all present at the scene of the crime.

The body was found near the Ohio River, just below the foot of the bridge leading to the town of Cincinnati. The bullet wound was found on the right side of the body. The bullet entered the body near the heart. The body was wrapped in the clothing in which it was found and was taken to the morgue, where it was examined by the coroner and medical examiner.

The coroner ordered the body to be removed to the morgue for further examination.

The coroner's report was as follows: "The body was found near the Ohio River, just below the foot of the bridge leading to the town of Cincinnati. The bullet wound was found on the right side of the body. The bullet entered the body near the heart. The body was wrapped in the clothing in which it was found and was taken to the morgue, where it was examined by the coroner and medical examiner. The coroner ordered the body to be removed to the morgue for further examination."
