Frank Adams, an old and respected citizen of Clear Creek township, Cooper county, whose farm is about sixteen miles north-east of Sedalia, died yesterday morning, and buried last evening. The deceased was about seventy years of age and had been laid up since Christmas with paralysis, or "bone neuralgia," some called it. Mrs. Adams preceded her husband to the grave about ten days. The remains were interred in the family graveyard on the place.—Sedalia Baseo.

H. W. Kuehner, of Boonville, was in Glasgow Tuesday with his wonderful coal oil can and lamp filler, which for simplicity and convenience cannot be excelled. He has sold to Mr. Henry Tilman six dozen cans, which gives him the sole agency of this can in Glasgow. Go and see it; to see it is to buy it. Mr. Kuehner has also gone into the wholesale tin-ware business, and informs us he has sold several large bills to our merchants. We acknowledge a pleasant business call from him Tuesday morning.—Glasgow Missourian.

Died last Sunday night, at his residence near Otterville, Mr. James M. Finley aged twenty-seven years. Mr. Finley was one of Morgan county's oldest residents, and most esteemed citizens. He grew up in an age when honor, honesty and industry, were crowning elements of manhood, and his nature was thoroughly imbued with those traits. He had accumulated a nice competency, but without forfeiting the confidence of his neighbors. He was laid to rest in the Odd Fellows' cemetery at Otterville, on Monday.—Tipton Times.
