A man run into a physician's office in St. Joseph, Mo., the other day and said a man had swallowed a two-foot rule and was lying by inches. The doctor said there was nothing as the patient once who swallowed a couple of patients chipped in, one saying a thermometer and died by degrees. The United States penitentiary, serving the five-year sentence for a military crime, was the warden, following the general order to take the fingerprint of all soldiers, attempting to impress on the warden's mind that his record was bad. The warden refused to make the record and the warden himself was the assistant who tried to make the record and the warden himself was the assistant who tried to make the record.

A curious result of the adoption by the United States Army of the system of identification by fingerprints, just reported to the war department, is the discovery in the person of a British soldier at Fort Leavenworth of a British murderer for whom the Scotland Yard authorities searched for years.
