A historical epitome of Andrew Stegleder December 5 at his home in town, is unavoidably out this week, but will appear in the Republican next week. The communication contains a list of names of interest in the life of Stegleder which will be read by many of his friends and for future reference.

Rev. Torrey, an evangelist, has been paid almost $300 per month for his services in conducting a series of meetings at Sedalia for the past four weeks. Three men, two singers, and a preacher, were paid $100 each during the time. A total of $10,000 was raised by the people in payment of the services of the five preachers.

If you want printed notices to come to the Republican office by telephone, call on the office by telephone and do the rest.

G. A. Brownfield has shipped car loads of cattle to the St. Louis market. He had purchased 200 persons. During the year 1909 will be short of this number, which is so short of this number that his shipments will be but few over 200 during the remainder of the year. He will add to this but not enough for 1908.
