Sunday night about seven o'clock C. G. Stegner, of Pilot Grove, with his wife and little girl and four other persons, driving an Oakland Six, had just reached the rails at the top of the steep hill on the south side of the track, when a west-bound freight, making a run for the long hill, loomed in sight from behind a string of box cars on the side track, which had hid its coming from the auto's occupants. Those in the car jumped, but Mrs. Stegner, with the little girl in her arms, jumped on the west side and the auto was thrown against her, brushing her side and injuring her quite severely. The child was knocked from her arms and rolled down the embankment unhurt. Mr. Stegner had one leg and hip badly hurt. The other occupants of the car were all right. The front of the auto was demolished.
