with a chunk of concrete, authorities said. In Tailahassee, a spokesman for Gov. Bob Graham said the National Guard had been alerted in case conditions worsened. Other cities in the Dade County area had their forces on standby.

The disturbances came during Orange Bowl week celebrations and the beginning of the winter tourist season. All Orange Bowl events remained scheduled, but subject to cancellation depending on the severity of the disturbances, said Ed Goss, public relations chairman for the Orange Bowl Committee.

The huge Orange Bowl parade is scheduled Friday night and the parade route would take it within three blocks of Overtown.

The district was reopened to traffic Wednesday, but then sealed off again, with police called back in, after residents and business owners called to demand protection. Liquor stores and gas stations were ordered closed.

Gary urged motorists to avoid Interstate 95 and the Dolphin Expressway through Overtown after black youths hurled rocks and bottles at suburban-bound cars Wednesday afternoon. Downtown state and county offices, and some private businesses, closed early so workers could get home safely. Engineers used a computerized traffic-flow system to aid the outflow.

The shots were fired to clear the road to freedom, it was said. Several people were injured and several police officers suffered minor injuries.

Police told residents they would have to take matters into their own hands. A curfew was imposed. No authorities from the National Guard were brought in.

Police said they had no information on who shot the motorist and they were investigating the incident. News of the shooting had spread swiftly through Overtown.

Police Chief Jim Johnson said, "We’re carrying our own hands and our own guns.

Also, the5,000 police officers were called out to investigate the shooting. 33, which was under way Tuesday morning, was in its early stages."

Reagan said "the motorist who was injured didn’t have a shot at my life. I was shot by a man who wasn’t a police officer."
